WEALTHY WIDOW DIES OF WOUND FROM COP'S GUN

MALDEN, Mass., May 4—(UP)—Mrs. Lillian M. Fowler, 52, a wealthy widow, died early today of a bullet wound inflicted by a policeman's service revolver.

The shot was fired early yesterday in Mrs. Fowler's home as she handed his revolver to Patrolman Francis J. Downing, 32, father of one child and a veteran policeman, after a "midnight snack."

Apparently not wounded, she hurried him out the door with the admonition, according to Downing, that he had "better go right away as the noise was loud for that hour of the morning." An hour later she telephoned a doctor. Two blood transfusions failed to save her life.

Downing was suspended from the police force on nine counts of neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming a police officer. Before her death Mrs. Fowler through her attorney said the shooting was accidental and asked that Downing not be prosecuted.

SENIOR PARKER NAMED IN CRIME

New York Suspect Says Detective 'Master Mind'

Geoghan has predicted that the grand jury will return more indictments this week after hearing Bleefeld's story.

The elder Parker was named as the directing genius of the Wendel abduction, Geoghan said, and rejected the first five "confessions" that Wendel asserted were "tortured" from him before accepting the sixth.

Parker generally was considered chief investigator of Gov. Harold G. Hoffman's inquiry into the Lindbergh murder and kidnapping prior to the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann. His son, Ellis Parker, Jr., indicted with four others for the Wendel kidnapping, is still a fugitive. The others are in custody.

ENGERT REPORTS TWO ATTACKS BY CRAZED ETHIOPIANS WHILE ITALIAN TROOPS APPROACH CITY

Little Staff in United States Property Power Effective Fire on Marauders; Situation in African City Feared Tense

WASHINGTON, May 4—(UP)—The American legation in Addis Ababa was under intermittent fire from the hands of native Ethiopians at 5 p. m. (Addis Ababa time) radio dispatches to the state department revealed today.

Two native women in the servants' quarters of the legation have been seriously wounded, he reported.

His 5 p. m. message said. "The situation is getting worse. Several direct attacks have been fired at the legation building, including the radio station since this morning. Two native women in servants' quarters have been seriously wounded."

Second Attack Started
After the first actual onslaught on the American legation had been repulsed, Engert reported that at 5 p. m. Addis Ababa time, the building had again come under intermittent fire.

The first attack had come at a time when the staff remaining in the legation was sorely weakened. A number of the defenders had left the walls on various missions when suddenly at the widely separated gates, natives armed with rifles appeared in force.

Native servants, radio technicians, legation guards and refugees quickly armed themselves with available guns.

He poured a brief but effective fire into the ranks of the marauders. At least one of the attackers was struck down and the attack was beaten off.

After an interlude of comparative peace which Engert explained as probably due to fear by the marauders that arrival of the victorious Italian columns was imminent, the pillaging was renewed.

Van Engert gave the following picture of conditions at that time (5 p. m. Addis Ababa time): "White flags are now flying on most houses."

UNION FAVORED BY METHODISTS

Viva Voce Vote Approves Joining Three Groups

COLUMBUS, May 4—The Methodist Episcopal church today accepted by a viva voce vote a plan of union with the Methodist Episcopal church, South, and the Methodist Protestant church.

Endorsed by Senior Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of Washington, D. C., and the college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, no difficulty was seen in the path of endorsement.

Debate was anticipated on the section of the unification plan placing negro churches under one jurisdiction. Although some churchmen objected to the provision as discriminatory, negro leaders praised it as "allowing negroes to govern their own affairs and be responsible for their own progress."

Favorable action of the 614 delegates at the quadriennial conference today requires three-fourths of ratification by separate conferences of the church and approval by the governing bodies of the two other bodies. Three or four years might thus pass before 8,000,000 Methodists were united in one church.

TO FACE IN HAMM DUCTION CASE

Pale and Shaken
Long Grilling; Missouri Wants Him

PAUL, Minn., May 4.—Relentless questioning by the department of justice of Alvin Karpis, Public Enemy No. 1, pale and shaking, and facing arraignment on charges of kidnaping William Hamm, Jr., before Judge Hoover, justice department chief, said in New York that he will be tried first for his part in the $100,000 Hamm abduction. The maximum penalty is life imprisonment. Later, he may be tried over to Missouri authorities who would like to convict him and sentence him to death for the murder of Sheriff C. R. Kelly of St. Louis.

Karpis has been indicted in the Hamm and Kelly cases and in the $100,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker. Agents questioning Karpis concentrated on still unsolved angles in the case—probably of persons suspected of aiding the escape of the abductors. In addition they are seeking further evidence in the case which they now consider "air tight." Karpis will be turned over to Attorney George F. Sullivan this week for arraignment. Federal officials considered his arrest in New Orleans last week "nicely" with plans to turn him over to Missouri authorities. Following usual custom, agents refused to discuss results of their long questioning.

TO PARKED ON MAIN CATCHES LOSS $20

Fire caused damage estimated at $20 to the Chevrolet sedan of W. Karshner, E. Union-st., yesterday afternoon. The blaze started while the car was parked on W. Main-st. The front part of the car was damaged and the fire spread to the tire of a parked car nearby but was extinguished before any damage resulted.

ablaze in the town and the insensate random firing continues unabated.

"Dr. G. C. Bergman and Dr. Stadin, whose wife was killed, of the Seventh Day Adventist mission are well and require no assistance for the present. It is said that one of their messengers was killed while enroute to this legation."

"Three German men and one woman have taken refuge in this mission compound. Our servants apparently are loyal."

"We now have one sub-machine gun which, by odd coincidence, is Italian. It was brought in by a policeman who fled to our compound for protection because he used to sell Abyssinian curios to Vice Consul Cramp."

Fears and hopes for the safety of the Americans in Addis Ababa waxed and waned alternately as the messages from Engert reported latest developments.

The text of the communications was being transmitted immediately to President Roosevelt who was watching the situation with concern. The White House had no comment, however.

Engert's attitude was displayed clearly in a message transmitted at about the time of his radio appeal for British assistance.

"I feel it would be a great pity to be obliged to abandon the legation and the radio," he said, "to certain destruction after holding out for three strenuous days."

Radio experts explained it probably was difficult if not impossible for the British and American legations at Addis Ababa to communicate directly by radio.

Messageelayed
Transmitters and receivers at both legations were tuned directly to communicate respectively with London and Washington. Hence it was simpler to send Engert's message to Washington and for Washington to relay to London and London in turn send the request back to Addis Ababa.

The state department reached the American embassy in London shortly before 11 a. m. EST and passed on Engert's request.

WASHINGTON, May 4—(UP)—Minister Cornelius Van H. Engert relayed a message from press correspondents, filed at 5 a. m., Addis Ababa time, said they were leaving at dawn in an attempt to contact the Italian advance guard. The message said:

"Your correspondents, Ames and Angelopoulos, with a white banner and a United States flag, are leaving at dawn in an attempt to contact the Italian advance guard."

"The city is relatively quiet after the fires had burned themselves out, with the exception of the howling of hyenas which are tearing apart their new found prey."

THEATER TICKET a Movie Ticket a Day

THE WINNER of the 500-mile Indianapolis classic, Kelly Petillo, says: "Camels hit the spot. I've found that smoking Camels—during and after meals—goes a long way in helping keep my digestion in good shape." Camels set you right!

WOMAN'S WORK is never done, according to the old saying. Mrs. Frank Smith is a typical modern homemaker. "Camels make food taste better," says Mrs. Smith. "My digestion works smoothly when I smoke Camels during meals."

ALL ABOARD! Away from home, a business man meets many conditions that upset the normal routine of digestion. Camels stimulate good digestion no matter where you are. Smoke them for digestion's sake. Camels never jangle your nerves.

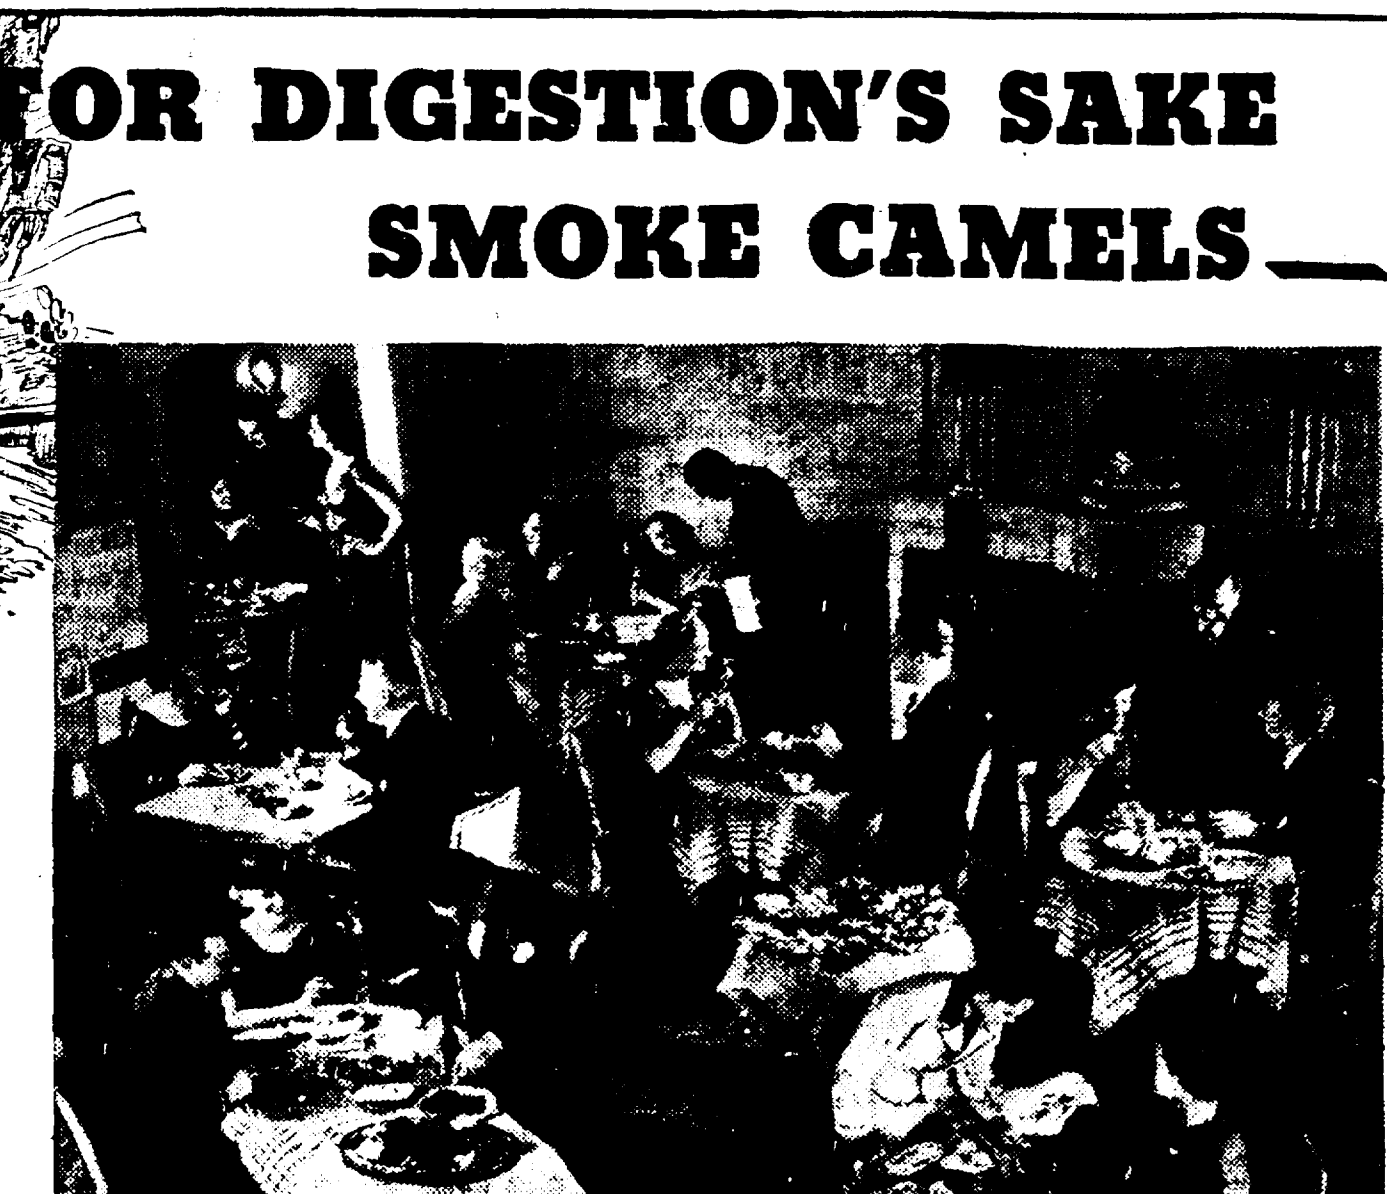

MASTER WELDER—Dan Rafferty has a job where good digestion counts. He needs a steady hand and a steady eye. "Smoking Camels helps my digestion," says Dan. "Camels taste mild and rich." Turn to Camels—for digestion's sake.

SECRETS OF THE DEEP. "Camels make food taste better and digest better," says Henry Siemer, master diver. "That tasty Camel flavor is made to order for me."

Smoking Camels Encourages Good Digestion, Good Feeling... Increases Alkalinity

Modern days are trying. Nerves get "wound up." Hurry, worry, and strain tend to interfere with normal processes of digestion.

It is a scientific fact that smoking Camels has an alkalizing effect, through increasing the flow of the alkaline digestive fluids, helping to keep digestion on its proper course. You sense a comforting "lift" and feeling of well-being as you enjoy the delicate flavor of your Camel. You can smoke Camels steadily. With their matchless blend of costlier tobaccos, Camels never get on your nerves or tire your taste.

PICKAWAY-CO'S "DEATH GAP"

IMMEDIATE improvement of that part of the Scioto Trail near the Mackey ford-rd, which has proved fatal to four persons in the last two months, is necessary. The state highway department should act at once to correct this part of Route 23, one of the busiest and most dangerous in central Ohio.

To persons who travel the road daily and exercise caution, the curve is not so dangerous, but for those who are using the highway for the first time, or those who drive too fast, it is extremely dangerous.

The road could be straightened, or the curve could be banked.

The toll of four in recent months does not cover the total number of lives lost on the curve. In recent years most of the fatalities on Route 23 have occurred at this point, which lies only a short distance south of the Franklin-co line.

The highway department, which annually spends millions to repair roads for better travel, should take immediate action before more lives are taken.

ONE MORE SPRING

LAGGARD and reluctant Spring seems at last to have come into its own. Most of the signs of its arrival are present. Fresh paint, the shrill blast of frogs along a stream, forsythia, lilacs, lawns, showing green, the whir and clatter of the mower, trees talking on their Summer raiment, citizens busy with their gardening—all of these evidences of the season's advent greet the eye at every turn.

At times we have been impatient with Spring's slow approach. This slow unfolding, however, has its compensations, not the least of which is prolonged delight of witnessing and admiring the partial fulfillment of the traditional promise of great wonders. This early phase of Spring is considered by many connoisseurs of Nature's beauties, notably the Japanese artists, as the most exquisite of all seasons—that brief period during which trees and shrubs are only partially clothed with burgeoning leaf and flower, when the stark framework of gaunt limbs is softened and adorned by the most tender of garments, tinted white and pink and green.

Schmeling, after studying the films, thinks Joe Louis' weakness is a vulnerability to right-hand punches. This is a delusion which Maxie will be permitted to nourish until the meeting in the ring.

Those who can escape from the imprisoning walls of factory, store, office or home these glorious days should do so.

World At A Glance

From the nature of his job probably Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins could not have avoided making many enemies.

He has them anyway. No other New Deal official is under such heavy fire from so many different directions. This does not seem to perturb the White House, but to some few among the managers of Democratic re-election campaign policy it is, confidentially, a cause of considerable worry.

HOLT'S COMPARISONS

They are worried all the more because, with New Dealers doing the investigating, an inquiry into WPA's activities cannot give a clean slate to Hopkins' organization in very convincing fashion.

Senator Rush Holt of West Virginia expressed himself harshly when he compared a WPA "probe" of WPA-ites with an investigation of Dilinger by Baby Face Nelson. Nevertheless, it was a telling way which to put his idea across—kind of comparison that can be made mightily effectively in campaign oratory; anybody can understand it. It's witty, too, and in the memory.

ROPER PROPOSAL SURPRISE?

WASHINGTON—The directors of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce pulled a fast one last week on "Uncle Dan" Roper.

The Secretary of Commerce, after some energetic wire pulling, finally wangled an invitation to address the convention despite the original plan of the directors not to invite a New Deal spokesman.

Roper devoted much time and labor to his speech. As finally drafted, his big feature was a ten-point program by means of which business men could aid in solving the unemployment problems. The formula was to be Roper's answer to the Chamber's challenge that the Administration tell industry how it could re-employ more men.

No. 1 plank in Roper's program was a proposal that business men themselves make a thorough survey of industry for the purpose of exploring the possibilities of adding men to payrolls. Such a study, Roper's manuscript declared, would be a great deal more valuable than a mere "head count" of the unemployed by the government—as demanded by business.

Roper planned to spring this proposal as a surprise. But he made one serious slip.

Several days before he was to make his speech, he sent an advance copy to the Chamber bigwigs. When they spotted his proposal they got excited. They did not relish being put in the spot where they would either have to follow his advice or be charged with turning down a reasonable suggestion for the solution of the unemployment problem.

To get out of this dilemma, the Chamber master minds decided to jump the gun on "Uncle Dan". The night before he made his speech, the directors, with a great fanfare of ballyhoo, announced that the Chamber would launch a nationwide survey of re-employment. This was precisely the proposal Roper planned for the next day.

NOTE—Although privately deeply chagrined by this maneuver, Roper took the thumping in silence. He stuck to the original text of his speech and put forth his proposal just as if the Chamber never had heard of it before.

WIFE-TO-WIFE

The dignity surrounding a Senate seat does not prevent Mrs. Huey Long from sending wifely advice to the women of Louisiana.

Recently she received a complaint from a Negro woman, Mrs. Jennie Manueal of New Orleans, stating that her husband was receiving only half pay on a WPA project.

Mrs. Long investigated, found that Manueal was receiving his pay in full. Then her wifely instincts came into play.

She wrote a letter to Jennie, saying: "The records show that from November 21, 1935, until March 27, 1936, your husband received ten checks, each for the full amount to which he was entitled."

"What you had better do is check up and see how your husband is spending the money he does get from the Government."

Even after Mussolini has achieved complete victory, his conquest will be hardly better than comparable to that of a two-hundred-pound tough who beats a small boy into insensibility.

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

ADAM BLISS

COPYRIGHT—RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 37

CAPTAIN KEYES was detailing facts to me as he had gathered them. "You asked me whether Miss Younger visited the beauty shop a week ago Monday." Keyes was saying. "She did not. Called and said she had to cancel her appointment. Miss Reed knows nothing more than that. At 2 o'clock Miss Younger drew $8,000 in cash from the bank. She was alone, and the transaction took perhaps 15 minutes. She asked for small denomination notes, the largest $20. She came prepared, and put the money in a small, flat case she carried with her for that purpose. The cashier thought it was queer at the time—wanting the small denomination notes. I mean, that is, for a person like Miss Younger. Where she went after she left the bank he didn't know. He personally escorted her to her taxi which was waiting, but did not hear the instructions she gave the driver. It would be impossible to trace these notes. They are too small, and of course the cashier took no numbers. A mixture of fives, tens, and twenties.

"It is possible that both Margalo and Van Every purchased their rubies from the same persons," I suggested. "And the reason that Van Every's notes haven't showed up yet might be that these persons have Margalo's bills of smaller denomination to use only a theory, Keyes."

"Not a bad one."

"This murderer is pretty bright," I continued. "Brighter than you think. He never bungles a job. Miss Randall's murder was timed to the minute. It was no accident."

"If you say that, you concede that Joyce Van Every was an accomplice," Keyes said sharply.

"I concede nothing of the kind. If Miss Randall had not opened her window to see Joyce, she would have opened it anyway. The murderer would have forced her to open it, some way, somehow. Joyce in this affair is just an accident, as I am."

"You have an alibi, a halfway alibi, Maughan. Joyce has not. She was on the scene of the murder when it was committed."

"Unconscious at the time that murder was done."

"According to her story, yes," Keyes gave quick orders to the driver, and we stopped soon after at my hotel, where he got out with me, and came upstairs. I hadn't invited him, but I could see the man wanted to talk, desperately. The day had unnerved him, too.

When we were settled comfortably, he took another cigar. "The place his unlighted cigars gave him was a mystery to me."

"Let's talk at the time again, starting with Margalo Younger. You, Van Every, and she reach Van Every's house at midnight, perhaps a little later. At 1 Joyce and Foster come in, go upstairs to the open door of the library and look in. At 1:10 Joyce reached her room. A few minutes later Foster goes downstairs, and out the unlocked open front door. At 1:20 you and Van Every discover something the matter with Margalo, you call the doctor. At 1:30, the mysterious fake telegram is delivered to Mrs. Peoples for Miss Younger. Miss Younger's apartment is several miles from Van Every's house. At 1:40 Dr. Narro reaches Van Every's house, and announces Miss Younger died. Later our doctor says she died around 12:30, not exactly, but either 20 minutes before 12:30 or 20 minutes after. We can't judge closer than that when we don't know the moment of death.

"I'm inclined to think she died about 12:45 when Miss Randall said she heard a mysterious creak on the stairs."

"That was before Joyce reached home," I put in quickly. "By that theory you eliminate Joyce entirely, and Foster, too."

"That's just it, Maughan, I don't know myself. The time is so mixed up, so horribly mixed up. This way the murderer could stand at the library door, fire the shot, dash out of the house again, take a car, drive to Miss Younger's apartment, unlock the front door, walk up 10 flights of stairs, deliver his telegram by 1:30. He would have plenty of time. If the murder was committed any later, say 1, or 1:10, he would not have time to leave the telegram."

"That's always assuming, Keyes, that the murderer delivered his own telegram."

"I'm working on that theory. I've hunted New York, and all the suburbs for the messenger, and can't find him. No one, you know, is going to ask a boy, or a man for that matter, to walk up 10 flights to deliver a message without someone knowing about it. It's uncanny. That's why I insist the murderer must have delivered the telegram himself. The message in itself seems so silly, so crazy. Why did the murderer send it? It wasn't necessary."

"My theory is that the message was sent merely to confuse. I can credit it no other way."

Keyes sighed. He was worried. "Well if he did, he is accomplishing his purpose. It is the only live clue I have, and I can't follow it. The thought I've had ever since Miss Randall was killed—that it wasn't the end, and that I would be powerless to stop another murder."

"There was nothing I could say or do to help him, so I was silent."

"The papers bounding me, my chagrin, my disgust. Still nothing I can do. Sure I can arrest Soon, and let him get the brunt of the wrath, but just now I think he's better off being watched by McManus. He's keeping the Chinaman in sight."

"Gonzales knows something," I ventured.

"Yes, but he won't tell. None of them will say a word. Barrimore still sick, dying. Wonder how he is now?"

I picked up the phone and called the hospital. His nurse said he was the same, no better, but that she thought he was partly conscious. He had been calling for Margalo. She had been trying to reach Captain Keyes.

Keyes and I were into our overcoats almost before I had hung up the receiver. His car sped us over to the hospital. The detective was himself again as we hurried through the half-lighted halls and finally came to the room which was Barrimore's. There was not a sound, except the whisper of the nurse as we entered the room. We must not excite the patient. He was very low—pulse weak, and heart hardly beating. A dim night light burned by the bed, and we did not turn on any others. Under the pale glow of the lamp Barrimore's face seemed thinner, more death-like than ever. He was hovering between life and death. I knew. His lips were moving slowly, as if they were forming words that were strange to them—numb, white lips.

"Margalo," they were breathing.

"Margalo."

"Don't excite him," the nurse warned again.

Barrimore's eyes opened slowly, then shut again, as if the effort had been too great. Even his eyes seemed pale, glazed with death.

"Margalo," he sighed once more.

Keyes drew up a chair and seated himself by the bed. He drew out a piece of paper and a fountain pen from his pocket, and handed them silently to me. Although he had given me no orders, I felt he wanted me to take down everything the dying man was saying.

"Do you know who killed Margalo?" Keyes asked slowly, letting the words sink into the sick man's brain.

"I told her—not to—to—the dull voice trailed off feebly.

"Not to what, Barrimore?" Keyes urged.

"She—was—in danger, I knew—if she—bought—the ruby—she would—be—"

Keyes glanced at me. Barrimore thought Margalo had bought the real ruby. He must have known the history of the gem.

"Did you sell her the ruby?"

A spasm of pain crossed Barrimore's face. The nurse slid to his side and grasped his pulse. During the remainder of the interview she was holding his wrist.

"Gonzales—"

Poems That Live

A ROUNDEL OF REST

If rest is sweet at shut of day
For tired hands and tired feet,
How sweet at least to rest for aye,
If rest is sweet!

We work our work not through the heat;
Death bids us soon our labors lay
In lands where night and twilight meet.

When the last downs are fallen gray
And all life's toil and ease complete,
They know who work, not they who play,
If rest is sweet.

BIRD SONG

The robin sings of willow-buds,
Of snowflakes on the green;
The bluebird sings of Mayflowers.
The crackling leaves between.
The veery has a thousand tales
To tell to girl and boy,
But the oriole, the oriole,
Sings, "Joy! joy! joy!"

The pewee calls his little mate,
Sweet Phoebe, gone astray,
The warbler sings, "What fun, what fun,
To tilt upon the spray!"
The cuckoo has no song, but clucks,
Like any wooden toy;
But the oriole, the oriole,
Sings, "Joy! joy! joy!"

The grosbeak sings the rose's birth,
And paints her on his breast;
The sparrow sings of speckled eggs.
Soft trodded in the nest.
The wood-thrush sings of peace,
"Sweet peace,"
Sweet peace," without alloy;
But the oriole, the oriole,
Sings, "Joy! joy! joy!"

At our table my partner made an opening bid, third hand, of 1-No Trump, with the hand marked North. Sitting South, I bid 2-Spades. My partner went 3-Spades. I passed because we were vulnerable, also because my hand was so weak that it really did not justify a rebid. Of course my partner could not go more than the simple assist. Her opening bid left a bare single support for my call. If either of us went higher I had to do it.

I stopped an instant to mentally calculate the chances of making 4-odd, for an extra trick. There were 7 in 20 chances for hearts to be divided 3-3 between opponents, giving me a long heart. The chances were that we would find spades divided 4-odd.

3-2, giving us 3 trump tricks and 2 added tricks for running. The two side aces in dummy meant a total of 7 tricks. To do what I wished I had to dig for 3 added tricks, of which a long heart would be one. Unless do is to make use of probabilities, averages and what our intuitions at the time suggest. A hand appearing just evening in a 13-table duplicate serves to illustrate some of the guesses that had to be made to obtain maximum results.

I won the opening lead with dummy's Ace of diamonds. Then I ran off the 3 trump honors, picking up all opposing spades and leaving a good trump in each hand, as calculated. The Ace of hearts won our fifth trick. East cunningly did not put up the K of hearts to help me. She let me guess. I guessed right and won with the Q. The next lead of hearts tumbled both K and J, leaving me a long heart, as hoped. East took her K of diamonds, for the second defensive trick. I ruffed the next diamond led. Then I led my long heart and discarded dummy's last diamond. Now came our last hurdle. I led a low club. West played low. Again I had to guess which honor to play. Again I guessed right, played the J and lost our third trick. Dummy's K of clubs and its spade won the two next tricks and gave us 4-odd. At other tables some made two. Bad guesses and went down. Some made one bad guess and made 3-odd. One table bid and made 4-odd.

Merkel and Seidel Feature Crosby's Hour

Two Film Stars and Violinist on Air Thursday; Radio Provides New Field for Older Barrymore

George Crosby is bringing George Raft, one of Hollywood's favorite stars, to the radio in the same program with the bubbling Una Merkel, who can on occasion out-draw any representative of the South. These two contrasts in Hollywood accents will be featured stars in Music Hall Thursday, May 7, with another very different personality, Toscha Seidel, the famous Russian-American concert violinist.

Raft is now on location making a new picture and unless unforeseen delays are encountered he will be back in Hollywood in time for the broadcast next week. The WEAF-NBC network at 9 p. m. (EST). Miss Merkel was scheduled for a recent Music Hall broadcast but her appearance was postponed until the current show. Both Raft and Miss Merkel are slated to be subjects of one of the human interest interviews the blonde actress will also appear. Raft is at present making production "Yours for the Night" with Dolores Costello.

Toscha Seidel, guest violin virtuoso of the program, has just completed a tour which covered practically the whole country. He ended the Scandinavian concert tour late last year and toured Norway and Sweden before beginning a full season of concerts in December. His New York appearance was at Carnegie Hall in February.

TO BARRYMORE

Pat O'Dell Microphone has the use of at least one established screen star, proved a very able Barrymore, leading the star-linged Barrymore — into fresh fields of activity for his versatile talents and to greater national fame.

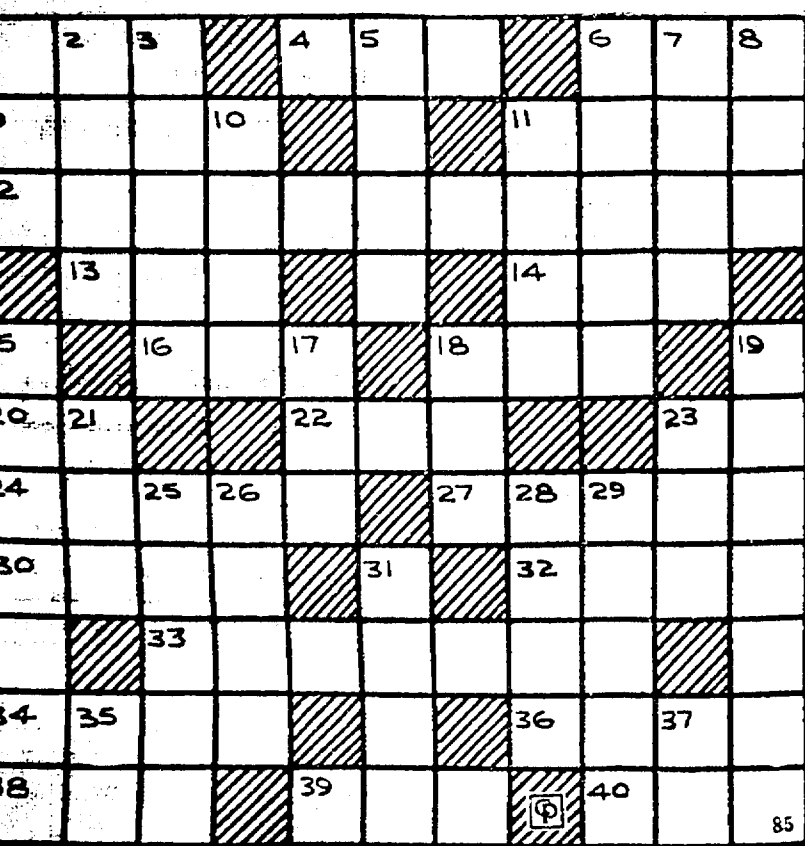

The older Barrymore's position in the film world has for many years been secure. He had and a large and sympathetic movie public. And, had he confined his efforts to screen work, was certain of a career as a highly successful actor.

However, radio interested Barrymore. He was the public's first radio star, and now look at him. As long as he lives or cares to act, Barrymore will be a popular actor on stage and screen. But radio, and radio alone, given us, in him, two new Barrymores, the result of Lionel's interest in music and literature.

An able pianist and something of a composer (he has written several concertos for piano and orchestra) Barrymore was offered the role of music commentator on Sigmund Romberg Monday programs. You may be familiar with his work in this field.

Now he comes to us again over the air in readings of the greater classics in literature, stressing particularly the works of American authors.
